Program Notes

These three pieces are drawn from Earth and the Great Weather, an evening-length 'sonic geography' of the Arctic. Although purely abstract in form, it is my hope that they are in some small measure informed by the elemental power of natural forces in the Arctic, and by the Inupiat Eskimo drumming and dancing.

*The great sea has set me adrift.
It moves me like a weed
in a great river.
Earth and the great weather move me,
have carried me away
and move my inward parts with joy.*

-Uvavnuk, Iglulik Eskimo Shaman

Francisco Perez wrote Ephemera following a two-year hiatus from composing any original percussion music. Inspired by the grit of his students at Lamar University over the eventful 2020-21 school year, Perez refers to this piece as “deeply meaningful.” The word “ephemera” is defined as “things that exist or are enjoyed for only a short time” – things that are fleeting, momentary.

Mudra consists of music which was originally composed to accompany the dance UrbhanaMudra by choreographer Joan Phillips. Commissioned by INDE '90 and premiered in Toronto in March, 1990 as part of the DuMaurier Quay Works series, UrbhanaMudra was awarded the National Arts Centre Award for best collaboration between composer and choreographer. The Music was subsequently edited and reorchestrated as a concert piece for the percussion group NEXUS during May, 1990. Mudra is scored for marimba, vibraphone, songbells, glockenspiel, crotales, prepared drum solo and bass drum.

The Instrumental ensemble in the original piece had a role similar to that found in traditional Indian dance concerts, where a solo drum is the principal voice. However, western instruments were not used to imitate an “Indian” sound. In response to the choreographic approach, classical Indian musical structures were allowed to influence the formal, rhythmic and harmonic aspects of the music. Rhythmically, Mudra is based on two important and common features of North Indian music: 1) motivic development (palta) and 2) rhythmic cadence formulas (ti hai). These structural devices are used most systematically in the final drum solo section of the piece in which rhythmic, rather than harmonic cadencing is used to create tension and, ultimately, accord.

The repetitive structures and meditative harmonies of Glass’s music have allowed it to exist in many versions for different musical instruments. Selections from his piano etudes and the solo piano piece Metamorphosis, were arranged in the late 1990s for a project with Brazilian musical group Uakti. This version, for Uakti’s unique gamut of custom-made instruments, was part of a project called Aguas da Amazonia, in which all of the movements (except for Metamorphosis No. 1) were renamed after the Amazon River and its tributaries.

The Bomba is a traditional Puerto Rican musical genre that dates back 400 years to the colonial plantations on the Island where West African enslaved people and their descendants lived and worked. The folk music style of the Bomba remains the most prominent in Puerto Rico and extends to many subgenres of the original Bomba Sicá foundational rhythm. A native of Puerto Rico and prominent percussionist, Rolando Morales-Matos combines his unique love for Puerto Rican dance rhythms with mostly traditional western style percussion instruments in this large ensemble composition.

Originally composed by Paul Halley for the Paul Winter Consort, Appalachian Morning is one of his most famous works. This arrangement was created by the request of Dr. John W. Parks IV and the Florida State University Percussion Ensemble, and is, from a formal, melodic, and harmonic standpoint, a straightforward rendition comparable to any of the Paul Winter Consort's many recordings/performances. However, in arranging this for percussion ensemble, I sought to bring out the bouncing yet fluid rhythmic qualities of the original by adding subtle lines and colors spread throughout the ensemble.

WE ASK YOUR COOPERATION

Please silence or turn off all cell phones and other electronic devices. Video and audio recording and/or broadcasting is strictly prohibited by copyright laws. Devices used in this manner will be confiscated until after the performance.

A WORD ABOUT CHILDREN

Families with children are always welcome at Messiah University Music Department events. For the courtesy of our performers and other patrons, we ask that you exit quickly and for as long as necessary with unsettled children. Everyone, regardless of age, must have a ticket.

IN THE EVENT OF AN EMERGENCY

Please take a minute now to locate the exits closest to your seat. During an emergency evacuation, an alarm will sound. If this happens, proceed calmly to that exit. Once you are out of the building, move to a location that is out of the path of emergency response vehicles.
